words MARY ELIZABETH MYRICK photo JOE PURVIS

THIS AIRY LIVING ROOM IN THE EASTOVER NEIGHBORHOOD of Charlotte is a combination of creamy neutrals, unobtrusive textures, and delicate patterns. With a marble fireplace, welcoming seating, and plenty of room to entertain, the only thing missing was the newest addition: a custom bar.

Not only does it make an afternoon cocktail all the more accessible, the bar also contributes an added depth and unique features to the room. A custom-cut antiqued mirror is repurposed as a backsplash to create a greater sense of light and space, in addition to contrasting the darker Porpoise Gray cabinets, perfect for added storage and minimizing clutter. Not to mention, the Celadon Quartzite countertops from Walker Zanger harmonize with the soft color palette and side tables. Altogether, a custom bar isn't an unappealing concept to add new life to a familiar space, alongside the promised background noise of clinking glasses.
